Article 94

Destruction of copies

(1) If the publisher intends to dispose of the unsold copies of the work for pulping within the period of three years from the agreed upon date of publication of the work, unless longer period is provided by publishing contract, he should first offer them to the author, at the price he would have obtained if copies were sold for pulping.

Provisions of paragraph 1(3.) and (5.) shall not apply to architectural buildings, unless the destruction of the building is dictated by the circumstances of the case.

(3) In proceedings against a person whose services have been used to infringe the right, and the existence of such infringement has already been finally established in proceedings against the third party, the infringement shall be presumed to exist.

Article 168 Compensation for damage and punitive damages

(1) For infringements under this Act, general rules governing causation of damage shall be applicable, unless otherwise provided by this Act.

(2) The infringer shall pay to the right holder damages in the amount to be defined under general rules on compensation for damage, or in the amount which is equal to agreed or customary royalty or remuneration for legitimate use of such kind.

(3) If a right under this Act was infringed intentionally or by gross negligence, the right holder may claim the payment of agreed or customary royalty or remuneration for such use, increased by up to 200 %, irrespective of whether he suffered actual pecuniary damage because of such infringement.

(4) When deciding on the claim for the award of punitive damages and setting of their amount, the court shall take into account all circumstances of the case, and in particular, the degree of culpability of the infringer, the amount of agreed or customary remuneration, and the achievement of a general preventive purpose sought by the award of punitive damages.

Article 169 Monetary satisfaction for non-material damage

Article 170 Provisional measures

(1) The court shall order provisional measures to secure non-monetary claims under this Act if the right holder shows probable grounds for belief that:

2. his/her right has been infringed or there exists an actual danger to be infringed.

(2) The right holder shall also show probable grounds for belief that:

1. a danger exists that the enforcement of claims will be made impossible or rather difficult;
2. the adoption of a provisional measure is necessary to avoid damage difficult to repair; or
3. a provisional measure, which may prove unfounded in the course of the proceedings, does not have more detrimental consequences for the alleged infringer that would have the non-adoption of such measure for the right holder.

(3) The right holder who proposes the order of a provisional measure without prior notification and hearing of the opposite party shall show probable grounds for belief, in addition to the requirements of paragraphs 1 and 2, that any delay of the order is likely to cause him/her a damage difficult to repair. In that event, the opposite party shall be given notice after the execution of the order at the latest.

(4) The right holder shall not be obliged to prove the existence of a danger that the enforcement of claims will be made impossible or rather difficult if he/she shows probable grounds for belief that the proposed provisional measure would cause the infringer only insignificant damage. The danger shall be deemed to exist when the claims are to be enforced abroad, with the exception of Member States of the European Union.

(5) The court may order any provisional measure to secure non-monetary claims referred to in paragraph 1, with which the purpose of security can be achieved, in particular:

1. to interdict to the alleged infringer the continuation of infringement already commenced and future infringements;
2. to seize, exclude from circulation and take into custody the objects of infringement and the means of infringement that are intended or used exclusively or principally for infringement.

(6) The court shall decide on the opposition against a decision on the adoption of a provisional measure within 30 days following the filing of the answer to the opposition, or by the end of the time limit set for the filing of the answer to the opposition.

2. his/her right has been infringed or that there exists an actual danger to be infringed; and
3. evidence of infringement will be destroyed or that it will be impossible to take such evidence at a later time.

(2) The right holder who requests the order to preserve evidence without prior notification and hearing of the opposite party shall show probable grounds for belief, in addition to the requirements of paragraph 1, that there is a danger of evidence of infringement being destroyed as the result of conduct of the opposite party or that it will be impossible to take such evidence at a later time. In that event, the opposite party shall be given notice after the execution of the order at the latest.

(3) The court may issue the order referred to in paragraph 1 to take any evidence, and in particular:

1. to inspect places, business records, inventory, databases, computer memory units or other things;
2. to seize samples of the objects of infringement;

(5) The provisions concerning provisional measures of the Act regulating execution of judgements and insurance of claims shall apply mutatis mutandis to the proceedings for preservation of evidence under this Article, unless otherwise provided by this Act. Proceedings shall be expeditious.

(6) Where it is subsequently found that the request for preservation of evidence has been unfounded or that the right holder has not justified it, the opposite party shall have the right to claim:

1. the return of the seized objects;
2. the prohibition of the use of information obtained; and
3. the compensation for damage.

(7) In the proceedings for preservation of evidence in accordance with this Article, the court shall ensure that confidential information from the parties be protected and that judicial proceedings not be used in bad faith with the sole purpose to obtain confidential information from the opposite party.

An act shall be deemed to be performed on a commercial scale if it has been performed for direct or indirect economic advantage.
